EXPLOSION REVEALS STORE OF BOMBS

FORBES GIVEN TWO YEARS IN VET GRAFT, IS FINED $10,000

Chicago, Feb. 4 (A.P.)—George A. Forbes, former director of the Veterans' Bureau, and John W. Thompson, wealthy St. Louis contractor, today were sentenced to two years' imprisonment to Leavenworth Penitentiary and fined $10,000 by Federal Judge

FIND BOMBS IN THE SOUTH END

At left is John Brown, who threw one of the bombs out of the window of his home on Warren street. Also shown is Police Officer McDonough, holding two of the bombs. Arrow indicates spot in back yard where some of the infernal machines were discovered.

BELIEVED MADE BY MYSTERY MAN WHO DIED IN NOVEMBER

A home-made bomb, tossed from a Warren street cellar door by a fourteen-year-old boy, threw the downtown section of the South End into an uproar today and unearthed a store of infernal machines.

THOSE DOGS of the Esquimaux breed, galloping in relays over the frozen trails of Alaska, covered 650 miles in 5 1/2 days. Wonderful four-legged creatures they are, and a brave man is Gunnar Kaason, who pushed on through the blizzard, without waiting for the relay that failed to meet him.

OF ALL THE ANIMALS, man is the most wonderful, having developed to highest point the topmost tip of the spinal column, the one we call skull.

The curious thing is that man excels the animals in physical endurance, as well as in thinking power.

We are amazed that relays of heavy four-legged animals, powerful Siberian hounds, should gallop over the snow and ice 650 miles in 5 1/2 days.

TWO DAYS AGO Bill Good-man, of Navajo, Ala., was called a "hobo." When he was in the freight cars or "rode on the rods." Now he is a hero with a pass authorizing him to ride comfortably on all trains of the St. Louis & San Francisco line.

On Monday night he crawled out of his hiding place on the train, after a collision, and, risking his own life, saved that of the engineer, lying beneath his engine, in danger of being scalded to death.

THE DISTANCE between bobolink and heroism is often short, and often only an opportunity is needed to change a hobo into a hero.

THE NEWS OF ALMOST any day would seem strange to a traveler from an old, civilized planet.

At Johns Hopkins University they will perform an operation on a man from Colorado accused of murdering his wife. Cutting his skull, giving his brain room to expand may eliminate alleged criminal tendencies. In days to come operations on the skull to remedy brain pressure, especially on the top, may become frequent.

IN LOS ANGELES a railroad official dies after having a stroke pulled. His disease was hemorrhagic, which means "a liking for hemorrhages."

IN THAT DISEASE the slightest cut is apt to cause fatal bleeding. We don't realize how average cut healing itself, and the white corpuscles attacking and destroying outside germs, like vigilant policemen, while the healing goes on.

IN MONTE CARLO ladies "play" have tennis—perfectly respectable ladies—with skirts cut off far up on the hips, with stockings rolled down and bare knees. Dressed that way they play better, and the air does them good.

Blair, United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue, received at Legion national headquarters here today.

DEATH BULLETS FIT BOY DUELLIST'S GUN

George Travels, Lexington youth slain on a lonely Lexington street, received not one bullet but two in his brain and the bullet in the gun of Joseph A. Stasko, Lexington High School athlete.

Dr. Windsor M. Tyler, associate medical examiner for the Northern district, and Medical Examiner Stasko of Suffolk County, disclosed this information today as the result of an autopsy performed on the body.

"HUGGER" ATTACKS ATLANTIC WOMAN

Missing Medford Boy and Sister Turn Up at School Weary-Eyed and Cold

A night in a ramshackle barn held true terror for ten-year-old Donald Chance and his nine-year-old sister Verna, than a possible whipping if they went home.

Police of Greater Boston had been asked to aid in finding the two children, who disappeared yesterday after leaving school. The search ended today when both appeared in their classrooms at St. Clement's Parochial School, Medford. Donald is in the fifth grade and his little sister in the fourth.

The children were aware that their teachers had complained to their aunt, Miss Isabel McDonald, of their tardiness in school attendance. The children are motherless and make their home with their aunt at No. 123 Summer street, Medford.

Fear that they would be punished if they came home, prompted them to remain in the barn, despite the cold and lack of food.

Rub the Chest

For Deep, Heavy Colds

There is the best way to get rid of a bad cold. First apply hot wet towels over the face and chest to open the pores of the skin.

Then massage briskly with Vicks for five minutes, spread on thickly and cover with two thicknesses of hot flannel cloths. Leave the bedchamber loose about the neck so that the vapors arising may be freely inhaled. These vapors, inhaled with each breath, carry the medication directly to the affected parts.

At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin, helping the vapors inhaled to relieve tightness and soreness.

ANSWERS LURE OF THEATRE

Beacon Hill and Louisburg Square.

Doesn't that pair immediately bring forward from the tablets of your memory thoughts of blubroids, the Cabots, Lovells and Lodges, the "It's" of society in Boston?

From the home of the city's most blue-blooded aristocracy, among whom there is yet to be found a tradesman, to the stage of the Casino Theatre, Broadway, is a migration of many paragnons, socially speaking.

Yet it is one that Evelyn Gardner, thirteen, daughter of Mrs. Gardner Gardner, whose family occupies an entire page in the social register of Boston, has taken.

And tonight Miss Gardner will make her debut in the chorus of "The Boy Who Sings," which ends the Broadway run Saturday and then returns in the Athens of America.

ALWAYS LOVED TO ACT.

A local descendant of John Gardner, who created King's Chapel in the eighteenth century, from who is radical as was the noted "Counsellor John" Gardner.

"I'd rather be in the company of show girls than debutantes," is the way this proud, demure Boston girl put it.

At the Casino today, while she waited for her first rehearsal, Miss Gardner and her mother sat in the empty house and watched curiously the chorists winking about in the dimly lit gymnasium.

"From the time she was three years old Evelyn loved to act," said her mother. "Her favorite part was that she always the queen."

"Is it now?" she was asked. The answer was a smile.

"When she grew a little older dancing was what she liked to do best and that has been the strongest impulse in her choice of a career," the mother added.

PAVLOVA HER IDEAL.

"When she was about eight, she became so good a mimic dancer that all the grown people wanted her for a partner." But she cared little for the ordinary kind of social life—the kind in which she might have won popularity as a good partner.

"One would not choose the stage at a career, perhaps, unless she loved it for its own sake. There is a certain amount of publicity that seems to be inseparable from it. But one is what she is. Inactive, tender, she cannot be changed and should not be created out of it. I've studied the traditional art and the Russian expresses methods. I look to Pavlova as an ideal."

MISSING NORWOOD YOUTH BELIEVED AN AVIATOR

A boy for whom it is believed to have been responsible for the disappearance of fifteen-year-old Clarence V. Norwood from his home at No. 119 Walpole street, Norwood.

It is a youth, dropped out of sight October 23 last, and no trace of him has been found since.

Young Norwood was an unusual student at the English High School at Norwood at the age of fifteen years. He was employed at the Bird Machine Shop in Norwood, spending much of his time working on airplane models. It is thought he may have enlisted in the aviation service.

The missing youth is described as being five feet seven inches tall, with light gray eyes and weighs about 140 pounds.

DISCUSS ENDING OF OPIUM CONFERENCE

General Fong A. T. Tamm, president of the international opium conference today, Tuesday, opened discussion of the question of limiting up to the conference. The dead end of the delegates continued.

The conference session of five, which includes England, France, the United States, Japan and Finland, met this morning. The American Commissioner, Stephen D. Dyer, remained in his decision that the American plan should be adopted. It would eradicate opium at the end of fifteen years.

CALL MORE U. S. AGENTS AT WHEELER PROBE

Dempsey Reveals His Romance With Actress Who Could Outpunch Many Boxers

Relates How Jessie Reed Was Knocked Out by Mae Devereaux During Dispute

By JACK DEMPSEY.
As Told to W. B. Seabrook.

CHAPTER XI.

I said at the outset of these articles that Jack Dempsey was an interesting study in psychology. He has a splendid memory, but it goes off at tangents.
His mind is not "single track."
This morning he started to tell me about girl prize fighters in Berlin and ended by telling me the complete inside story of his "entanglement" with Mae Devereaux, beautiful Broadway musical comedy star and dancer.

I never interrupted him in such digressions. I get more in the end by letting him ramble. He was saying, "—when the bell rang, the smaller girl came out of her corner and drove a straight left to the other girl's body—and then she slid off the track into the more intimate narrative."

"But, say, the best girl boxer I ever saw or ever expect to see is little Mae Devereaux, right here in New York. I wouldn't ever want to see her in an exhibition ring. I believe ring-fighting is a game for girls, under circumstances. But, if she did go in, there's more than one boob he-banana-wait! I believe she could lick."

"She ought to be good. She had the same trainer I had. Her real name, you know, is May O'Hara. The trainer of Eddie O'Hara, who was one of my regular sparring partners until he died—told me she was a A GIRL IN THE RING.

"O'Hara helped train me before the Willard fight, and he was in Atlantic City with me while I was getting in shape to meet Carpenter. One day he brought his sister, May, and her mother to the training camp to meet me. I liked her from the first, and I still like her very much. We got to be good friends right away and she and her mother got in coming back to watch us."

"One afternoon Eddie said to me,
"Jack, did you ever see a girl with the gloves on? I laughed and said, "No, and I never expect to. Hair-pul-ling's not in their line."

"He said, 'Well, may thought she wanted to learn to box and I've been giving her lessons at home, and she's got to be pretty pretty good, especially with the footwork.'"

"I thought if that was the case, I'd like to see what a girl could do so I fixed it up, with only the mother and Eddie and Doc Kearns and myself."

"She put on a short gymnasium skirt and tennis shoes and a sweater and a pair of boxing gloves, and she was cute as pie to look at. Eddie was going to lose with her. He was damaged and shadow-boxed around the ring, and rubbed her feet in the rings. And then she went back to her corner and waited just like a regular fighter."

"Doc Kearns pulled the glove, and she sailed into her brother Eddie like a little white-hot bullet. He was believing it, he had taught her pretty nearly every trick in boxing that he had taught me. She could duck and weave and sidestep, and hook and clinch, and she could uproot like a good fellow—and some of her jab landed smack on Eddie. Of course, he didn't hit back, except to get to watch. She had steam and speed and everything. And you'd never expect it from that kind of a girl.
For she's a daddy's girl. But being a good professional dancer, I guess she was in pretty good physical shape and not so soft as she looked."

"I asked her afterward what she had learned from me, and she said,
"Mostly because it's fun and good exercise, but you know Broadway, and some times I might want to give some kid masher a poke on the jaw, and it would come in handy." I said, "How about other girls?" And she grinned and said, "Well, of course, I never strike a lady, but if a lady ever started the hair-pulling stuff with me, I might fight."

"Well, after a couple of months after that, one of the funniest things you ever heard of happened and Jack Kearns was there to see it. You know the Fifty-Fifty Club."

Jack Asked to Be Left Out of This Picture—Not because he is afraid of so many girls, as shown in center. Directly above the outstretched arm is Eddie's sister, Mae Devereaux, the knowledge in a duel with Pearl Germond, pictured at left, and Jessie Reed, shown under the arm.

It used to be a swell little dance place. You saw Polaris, girls and comedy stars, and society swells and all sorts there.

JESSIE REED TAKES COUNT.
"Well one night May O'Hara or Mae Devereaux, as her stage name was, was at the Fifty-Fifty dancing with Jack Kearns, and there were two other James there from the Poline. Pearl Germond and Jessie Reed, who had an old grudge or something, were dancing past their table. Jessie said out loud to Pearl, "That's a girl I don't like," and stopped and said she danced by her.
"I'm sorry you don't like me," and I guess maybe she laughed or something, for the two girls were furious, and Jessie Reed started over to her table, and reached over to grab her by the hair."

"May is a really nice girl—not the sort that gets into rows in public places at all—and for all I know these other two may be the nicest kind, too—but you know what I know is like—of 'em—when they lose their tempers."

"I guess May thought the stuff her brother had taught her would be more dignified, than clawing and scratching and hair-pulling.
Anyway, she ducked out of her seat, and when Jessie Reed kept coming at her she shot out a right hook that landed square on the other girl's chin and made her see stars.
It must have been an awful surprise. Dumbfounded, she was a good deal bigger than May, out in to be up her front, and May caught her with a jab in the ribs and an uppercut that finished the battle. If I had been there to see it I guess he would have been proud of the way his little sister used what he had taught her."

"Jack says the women in the place were as surprised as if they had seen a miracle, and that the men, especially those that went in for athletics and hand-to-hand fighting, looked, gave May a regular ovation."

"It was quite some time after that that the story got into the newspapers that May and I were engaged, and I'll tell you how that came about."

NEWS LEAKS OUT.

"When May came down with her mother to our camp in Atlantic City, where I was training for the Chrenfield fight, some of the sporting writers remembered that she had also been at the camp a lot of the time when I was training for the Willard fight, back in 1919. What they didn't understand was that she was simply one of the family, as you might call it, being the sister of Eddie, one of my best trainers, and that that was why she was the only girl we let in to see our private workouts."

"When she came back to the Atlantic City camp, some of them wanted to know the reason out of it, but I told them the real truth, and they laid off."

"When she and I were really very good friends, and I hope we will always be good friends. She's the only girl I ever saw who really knows anything technically about the boxing game. Eddie had not only taught her a lot about boxing, but he had told her hundreds of stories of the ing ring, and she knew almost as much as I did about ring history.

"It's nice to have a girl like that to talk to. Usually you have to talk to girls about things they are interested in, and when one comes along that you can talk to about your own work—about the thing that you are most interested in, you always want to see her again."

"She's as pretty as a picture, and I guess when people would see us occasionally sitting at dinner at the grill in the Traymore, talking our heads off to each other, or maybe taking a little ride in the wheel chairs on the boardwalk, still so absorbed in talk that we couldn't see anybody else for looking at each other, I guess maybe it would have been hard for them to believe that we were talking about right hooks to the jaw and why Corbett couldn't beat Jeffries in their last big fight, and what had become of Ted Lewis, and whether Georges Carpentier was really as fast as they made him out to be."

POLES WILL TALK.

"It's a doggone funny thing, but if a man is interested in a pretty girl, and goes around with her, and likes to talk with her, everybody takes for granted they must be going to be married."

"Well, on top of that came Eddie O'Hara's death. Believe me, that was the blow to me, and not only so, but how to the stars, Eddie was not only a great young boxer, he was one of my best friends."

"It was a great loss to both of us, and naturally I went right away to see her. For a couple of weeks I went nearly every day out to the apartment she and her mother had in Harlem.

"And then for quite a while afterward I used to run out to see them occasionally, when I could. Presently it was all over Broadway—even before it got in the newspapers—that May Devereaux and I were going to be married."

A DELICATE POINT.
"Everywhere I went people asked me about it. I wish you or somebody else would tell me what is exactly the thing to do in a case like that. When people come and tell you you are supposed to be married to a nice girl that you like—and you're not really engaged to her, but you are good friends with her and don't want to say anything that might hurt her or hurt your friendship—I ask you, what do you say?"

"You can't exactly say, 'No, of course I'm not engaged to her, but maybe I'll marry her one day.' That wouldn't be polite. And half the time they don't believe you, anyway. The best thing I've figured out is just to stall. When people asked me about May, I just said, 'Well, she's a peach of a girl, all right, and would make anybody a good wife.'"

In the next chapter, Jack Dempsey will tell the true story about his relations with Mae Palmer, whose husband sued him for $100,000—and about the man who tried to slip his face on Broadway.

PUBLIC VIEW ON TRUSTS AIRED IN RAIL SUIT

Erroneous Report of Champion's Engagement to Actress Explained by Jack

New Haven, Ct., Feb. 4.—That there has been a gradual change in the trend of thought and opinion as to the attitude of the public of the United States to trusts and combinations was the opinion expressed in the United States District Court here by Attorney George D. Watson in his argument for the New Haven Railroad twelve days ago last week against the Pullman Company of Chicago. The hearing before the court was on motion by the Pullman Company to dismiss the suit. Judge Thomas reserved his decision.
The attitude of the government

Attorney Arthur W. Marsh of Haddam, representing the Pullman Company, took issue with going counsel, declaring that the Sherman antitrust law is just as much in effect today as it was when it was enacted years ago.

"It means anything," he declared, "it means that the very concept of the New Haven Road of the Boston & Maine and the Maine Canal, railroad from 1914 to 1923 was illegal from start to finish, course not, Jack, but I hope we'll always be good friends."

PROPER PLACE FOR TENDLER

BY RINGHIE

JOE TIPLITZ, Philadelphia's rugged lightweight, was a courier at the sporting department today. Tiplitz is here to battle Jack Zine of Pittsburgh in a ten-round bout at the Army A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building tomorrow night.

Tendler was accompanied by Sam Tish, his manager, and Abe Tendler, a brother of Lew Tendler, who was recently knocked out in five rounds by Zine at Pittsburgh. Abe came to Boston with Tiplitz in the hope of seeing the latter avenge the knockout suffered by Lefty Law.

Tiplitz is a former champion of Tendler. They both formerly fought between Tiplitz and Glavin, and the southerner has his list from Bob Lee, Jimmie and Willie. There isn't anything gentle or lenient about the way Tiplitz pursues his fight. He's not a lenient man when it comes to skill, but he is a very cool and efficient fighter, a pair of boxing gloves.

BOSTON has been Tiplitz's winning city. Johnny Dundee is the only boxer who has ever won over Joe here. The Bostonian danced his way to a couple of close wins over Tiplitz. Tish, in an interview, said that he was sure that Tiplitz was a very good fighter, but he was not a very good one.

THE winner of the fight had been the Grand Champion of the world, Tish, who will top the card at night, will receive a prize of $100,000. Tish, who will top the card at night, will receive a prize of $100,000.

STANAKI will tackle all comers in a "no-holds-bar" fight to nine rounds. He has posted $10,000 to wrestle Lennie Laidlaw, who is a champion of the world. Stanaki is a champion of the world.

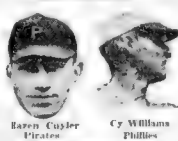

CHARLEY WEINERT, champion of Louis Firpo, will be taking a great chance in a fight to nine rounds. He has posted $10,000 to wrestle Lennie Laidlaw, who is a champion of the world. Weinert is a champion of the world.

SHARKEY is very likely to pick up the victory in a fight to nine rounds. He has posted $10,000 to wrestle Lennie Laidlaw, who is a champion of the world. Sharkey is a champion of the world.

Early on the 19th of April, 1775, a tall man drew up his company of 70 on the Green, in Lexington.
 * * * "If they want a war," he said, "let it begin here!"

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1925

BOSTON AMERICAN

"Such men and their deeds are the precious treasures of every community. Their commemoration stimulates public spirit, and public spirit, not private wealth, is the main-spring of the American Republic."

Minute Men Prepare to Celebrate the 150th Anniversary of THE Minute Man

TEN WEEKS HENCE the thoughts and the attention of patriotic America will be turned in the direction of the Middlesex County towns of Lexington and Concord, where, on an April day one hundred and fifty years ago, was prefaced the history of a nation, the beginning of an empire.

The President of the United States, together with the members of his Cabinet, the cadets of the United States Military Academy at West Point, the famous Marine Band of Washington, and governors and senators to the number of a score or more, are expected to take part in the Lexington-Concord celebration of the anniversary.

Sharing in fame with the encounters two months earlier at Lexington and Concord is the Battle of Bunker Hill, fought on the 17th of June, 1775, and ever since commemorated in Massachusetts.

The present year, therefore, brings the 150th anniversary of not only Lexington and Concord but Bunker Hill.

The glory of these struggles is the common heritage of all Americans. Standing on ground baptized in the blood of the brave, the sons and daughters of all the States will join in doing reverence to the memory of the heroes of '75.

There will be official receptions, public buildings will be decorated, bells will be rung, national salutes fired, fireworks displayed, bonfires burned. For at least a day or two, Boston and the immediate neighborhood will be the sacred Mecca of the American people.

The early battles of the Revolution were fought on Massachusetts soil but they were not fought for Massachusetts alone. The Nineteenth of April and the Seventeenth of June belong to the Nation.

Whatever publicity is given to the three major celebrations is apparently to be "natural" or "digested" publicity. There is to be no loud blare of trumpets, no suggestion of circus or hippodrome, no announcement of railroad excursions at round-trip rates. Other cities and other States might conceivably act differently, under the same circumstances, but in connection with these proud days and their sesquicentennial observance Massachusetts seemingly is determined to be her own true conservative self.

Yet the dates and their significance ARE as well known as any others on the calendar and it is altogether likely that the number of visitors to New England this year will rise to record-breaking proportions.

A few of the visitors will come to us as early as April. More will appear in June. In July and August, the scenes where American liberty was rocked in its infancy will be thronged by thousands of pilgrims, come to honor the memory of soldiers and statesmen who laid the foundations of the Republic.

Ours, the Adamsses, Franklin, the Committees of Safety, the Boston Tea Party, Quincy, Warren, Dawes, Revere, Captain Parker, Captain Davis, Prescott, Putnam, Warren, Stark, some of us will hear and read more about them than we have heard or read since school-days.

Boston, we shall be reminded, was a community of only 15,000 people; Somerville had a population of about 250.

Pictures and pageantry will help us to visualize the events which led up to the great conflict: clashing with stamp masters, bickerings along the waterfront, tumults and tea parties up and down the land.

Some of us have got into the habit of taking this New England of ours for granted; the commemoration of acts of heroism will help us to appreciate those brave, buoyant, vigorous men and women of one hundred and fifty years ago whose life was the life of the frontier.

As the anniversary days approach there will be more and more discussion of the great events they

"Here Once the Embattled Farmers Stood, and Fired the Shot Heard 'Round the World"

A walk of about half a mile up Monument street in Concord brings the visitor to the Old North Bridge, the scene of the Concord Fight.

The point at which the Provincial forces gathered on the brow of the hill, 300 yards beyond the bridge, is marked by a tablet set on the wall and by a boulder on private grounds nearby.

A few rods to the north was the house occupied by Major John Buttrick, who gave to his troops the first order ever given to American rebels to fire upon the soldiers of their king.

The bronze statue of the Minute Man, by Daniel C. French, "the most artistic statue that stands out of doors in America," stands on the spot where this "all irrevocable" order was given.

On the nearer side of the stream stands the monument erected by the town in 1836, and bearing the following inscription:

"Here, on the 19th of April, 1775, was made the first forcible resistance to British aggression. On the opposite bank stood the American Militia. Here stood the invading army and on this spot the first of the enemy fell in the War of that Revolution which gave Independence to these United States. In gratitude to God and in the love of Freedom this monument was erected, A. D. 1836."

commemorate and more and more public interest in the coming celebrations.

If, however, Lexington and Concord are able to take care of even the Massachusetts neighbors who will desire to be with them on Sunday, April 19, and Monday, April 20, they will be doing quite as much as can be asked of them.

Boston, big as THIS town is, generous as she is and expert in conceiving and staging celebrations, will be taxed to the utmost to entertain so much of New England as will want to assemble on the 17th of June in Monument Square, Charles-town.

Luckily, as it appears, both celebrations will take place from three to ten weeks before the appearance of the great annual rush of visitors to the seashore, mountain and lakeside resorts of the Summer Playground of the Nation.

However, there is no city in New England, and scarcely a town or a village, for that matter, too small to stage a 1775 pageant all its own.

The Liberty Tree, the Boston Massacre, the meetings in the Long Room of Edes' printing office or in the Green Dragon Tavern, where plans were laid for the Tea Party, Paul Revere's first long ride to the door of John Sullivan at Durham, N. H., followed by the raid on Fort William and Mary at Newcastle and the seizure of gunpowder and small arms which were used later at Bunker Hill, the story offers no end of possibilities in the way of impressive and comparatively inexpensive pageantry.

The midnight rides of Dawes and Revere, to Lexington and Concord, and that scene on the Green in Lexington early on the morning of the 19th, when Captain John Parker took command:

In the raw morning, a little after daybreak, a tall man, with a large forehead under a three-cornered hat, drew up his company of 70 men on the Green—farmers and mechanics like himself. They wheeled into line to wait for the Regulars. The captain ordered every man to load his piece with powder and ball. "Don't fire," were his words, "unless fired upon; but if they want a war, let it begin here." The Regulars came on. Some Americans offered to run away from their post. Captain Parker said, "I will order the first man shot dead that leaves his place!" The English commander cried out, "Disperse, you rebels! lay down your arms and disperse!" Not a man stirred. "Disperse and take care of yourselves!" he shouted, again. Not a man stirred. He ordered the vanguard to fire; they did so, but over the heads of our fathers. Then the whole main body levelled their pieces, and there was used of ten new graves in Lexington. A few Americans returned the shot. British blood stained the grass which waved in the wind. "Disperse and take care of yourselves!" was the captain's last command. There lay the dead, and there stood the soldiers; there was a battle-field between England and America—never to be forgot, never to be covered over. The "Mother-country" of the morning was the "enemy" at sunrise. "Oh, what a glorious morning is this!" said Samuel Adams.

It began at Lexington, to be ended at Yorktown, the series of events which made the colonies a Nation, with Bunker Hill and Saratoga, Bennington and Valley Forge, King's Mountain and Charleston, Trenton and Princeton, Camden and Guilford Court House, on the way.

The pause at Lexington, as the masters of pageantry will show, was invaluable to Concord. Pitcairn and his redcoats, delayed half an hour by this overtire, marched on towards Concord little knowing what would meet them there.

"As they climbed the hills in Lexington and Lincoln, they could surmise, however, that the country was rising," says Sanborn, "for the churchbells were ringing an alarm of fire."

Those of us who can will be present in the Town Hall at Lexington on the night of Sunday, April 19, next, at the exercises under the auspices of the Lexington Historical Society, especially if, as is the present hope, President Coolidge accepts the invitation of the committee to be present and deliver an address.

Thousands of Americans who have no expectation of visiting the historic towns, this year or any other year, will enjoy the broadcasting of the program by radio.

But the fact is that every community in New England can have a Lexington-Concord day of its very own, not necessarily on the same day and preferably, indeed—on behalf of the Summer visitor—at some date in the vacation season.

And if the pageant is deemed to be a too vast or a too expensive method of celebration, either because of expense, the lack of facilities or the size of the Summer community to be drawn upon, there remain such other forms of presentation as the tableau, the motion picture, or a program of combined song and story.

The big thing is that we shall be MINDFUL of these important dates in our history and celebrate them fittingly and becomingly.

And that we give timely warning, to our friends beyond the borders of these Six States, that this IS the year.

If there is to be no joint action by the New England States in the way of an invitation to the rest of the country to join with us in celebrating the 150th anniversary of Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill, it will devolve upon the New England Minute Men of today to see it, nevertheless, that an invitation goes forth.

Every reader of these lines is hereby appointed an working member of the (unofficial) Committee on Invitations.

In writing to friends and relatives outside of New England, be sure to mention that this IS the 150th anniversary of the beginning of things American. Tell them what Boston and the towns are preparing to do, by way of celebration. Re-ignite their interest in Plymouth, Salem, Portsmouth, Kittery, Dover, Bennington, Vergennes, Deerfield, Newport, Providence, ALL the historic towns of New England.

And remember, Minute Men, that in enlisting upon OUR campaign, on behalf of New England, we selected as our models the Minute Men who served under John Parker and Isaac Davis.

Like them, WE are on call, IN THE SERVICE OF NEW ENGLAND.

WE must be ready, as THEY were, at a minute's notice.

They were asked to DIE for New England, and they died bravely.

We are asked to LIVE for New England. Let us live bravely.

He is a brave man, a true Minute Man, who day by day, quietly and even inconspicuously, gives of his level best to the task he has in hand, whatever that honest task may be.

On that April day in 1775, the loss of the yeomanry was 91. At Bunker Hill, in June, the Americans killed and wounded numbered 449. There come to us the names of only a few, and these of some of the OFFICERS.

Who will say that the privates were not quite as important to the Cause?

And who will say that the faithfulness, the integrity, the skill of the private in the commercial and industrial armies of OUR New England, are not quite as important as the ability, the vision and the courage of his leaders?
